

Milan-Sanremo: Kristoff just one step off Milano-Sanremo podium

The European champion fourth after taking third in the group sprint, Matteo Bono escaped for 260kms. It was a bitter-sweet fourth place for Norwegian Alexander Kristoff, who just missed the podium in Milano-Sanremo. The European champion, 2014 race winner, took third place in the group sprint behind solo winner Vincenzo Nibali.

Filippo Ganna long day in the breakaway at Gand-Wevelgem

"It was a good experience. I need to learn more about these kind of races and to stay in the heart of it".

Milestone day for planet at MILAN-SANREMO

On Saturday, Team Novo Nordisk's Charles Planet rode in the main breakaway at the 109th edition of Milan-San Remo, which puts a rider with diabetes in the break at the longest one-day race in the world for four consecutive years. "I have absolutely no regrets; it is a great day when you achieve your goals and end with no regrets," Planet said. "Now in my fourth San-Remo, I have more experience and I could see when the right move was going. After about 10 kilometers, I saw a good move and we got away."

Ferrari fifth again in Catalunya sprint

Roberto Ferrari sprinted to fifth in the sixth and penultimate stage of the Volta a Catalunya in Tofferrera. Due to bad weather, the stage was shortened to 117 kilometres. The UAE Team Emirates sprinter took third in the group sprint behind the leading escape duo, winner Maximilian Schachmann (Quick-Step Floors) and Diego Rubio (Aqua Blue Sport). Alejandro Valverde (Movistar) remains the overall leader. "We'd hoped for a group finish, but the two ahead went truly strong," said Ferrari. "In the sprint, I fought to maintain my spot up until the final 200 metres and in the end, I take home another fifth spot."
